AMBA Hosts Crisis Roundtables, Connects Members with Resources

Indianapolis, IN – Last week, as states continued to announce statewide "Sheltering in Place" orders that advised all residents to stay home except for "essential activities," the American Mold Builders Association (AMBA) launched an effort to virtually connect its members to one another and critical, coronavirus-related resources. Included on the calls were representatives from Benesch Law, who were able to provide critical counsel and guidance for employers navigating the evolution of the coronavirus.

Together, over 80 mold manufacturers connected to discuss what constituted "essential activities," explore shutdown procedures and policies, review related legislative updates and share best practices developed within their facilities.

Members also were provided access to an exclusive, members-only COVID-19 Resource Hub, which offers access to:

- Past webinars, roundtable discussions and upcoming event opportunities
- Recent benchmarking on over 88 COVID-19 company policies, procedures, action plans and related resources
- Updated tax policies from Mueller Prost and Federated Insurance, including extended deadlines and tax relief
- Amerimold Sourcing Assistance Project, which helps facilitate sourcing and procurement needs amongst manufacturers
- Benesch COVID-19 Task Force and related resources
- Additional resources, including CDC and other government-related documents

"This is an unprecedented event in our lifetime, and our members require guidance and access to resources more than ever," said Kym Conis, AMBA managing director. "We are working around the clock to identify our members' needs in this ever-changing environment and connect them with the knowledge they need to care for their employees and manage their bottom line."

The AMBA staff will continue to add resources, discussion opportunities, topic-focused webinars and more to its COVID-19 Resource Hub. Members can access the AMBA COVID-19 Resource Hub here. To see what other events are scheduled, visit the AMBA Events page here.
